TO THE IMPERIAL CHARTISTS.

' MY DEAR AND PERSECUTED BROTHER CHARTISTS, " These are, indeed, times to try men's souls." The good ship Charter has been caught in one of those trade winds for which she was not prepared, it was so sudden and not announced by any of those usual omens which precede a coming revival. Some of th hands have been washed overboard, but the complement has been again made up, and not a soul on board who would not rather sink with the crew than abandon the wreck. Oh I we have been foully treated : most foully persecuted : but heed not persecution. If the principle is worth living for, it is worth dying for, and therefore worth persecution-bearing. When a military commander routes his enemy he endeavours to complete his triumph by scattering the fugitives 1839, would "lay the flattering unction to their others from occupying that position from which adherence to principle. COVENTRY .- The following resolutions were passed at a public meeting on Tuesday evening.—First. That this meeting views with feelings of alarmand indignation the numerous arrests of the advocates of the People's Charter, firmly believing the objects of the government, are to perpetuate the horrors of class-legislation by the employment of perjured spies and the prevention of public discussion -- Second. That this meeting, in spite of Whig and Tory threats and despotism, pledges itself io exercise increased zeal and devotion in the cause of the starving millions and nover to relax in their exertions antil the People's Charter becomes the constitutional law of the land .- Third. That this meeting deeply sympathizes with our patriotic brother Chartists now in bondage, and solemnly pledges itself to raise a competent fand for their support, and also for the comfortable maintenance of their afflicted wives and families.

HOLLINWOOD .- On Sunday evening last, the Chartist room, Ralph Green, was crowded to hear a lecture from Mr. Thomas Rankin, of Salford. Before the lecturer arrived, Mr. John Massey, of Newtonheath, delivered a short address, which had a powerful effect on the audience. Mr. Rankin was then introduced by the chairman, when he delivered a most eloquent lecture, in the course of which he shewed the necessity of all classes agitating for nothing less than the Charter.

THE BANNER OF GREEN.

The Tories come forth with their banners of blue, All straightforward tyrants, we'll give them their due; Profuse with their money, but flerce in their wrath, The darkness of faction endangers their path. They sprung from the blood and the refuse of war. The fame of their murder was echoed afar; And still on the vitals of freedom they feed, And tyranny writes the dark page of their creed.

The Whigs they come next, with their banner of flame, The friends of the people in nothing but name; They wheedle and tell you economy's plan, Then starve and imprison you. aye, to a man. These political toll-bars, they keep you away From the broad land of liberty, truth, and fair play: If you value the weal of the many-the poor. You will stand 'neath the Whigs and their banner no

But hurrah for young liberty, dauntless in mien, Hurrah, gallant lads, for "the banner of green ;" Let tyrants and fools smile on yellow and bine. We'll still to our own spotless flag remain true. The day will arrive when oppression will cease, When freedom shall wear her bright laurels in peace; Then wherever the dwelling of man can be seen, How prondly shall wave "the gay banner of green."

THE CHARTIST HEARTS OF OAK. A PARODY.

(Written in Kirkdale Prison)

Come, cheer up ye Chartists, to glory we steer, To add something new to this wonderful year; To freedom we call you, ye shall not be slaves, For all shall be free as the sons of the waves. Hearts of oik are within, Jolly Chartists our men, Who always are ready, As Chartists be steady, To fight and to conquer again and again.

We noter see our foes but we wish them to stay, They never see us but they wish us away; If they run, why. we follow, and freedom adere; For if they won't fight, what can we do more? Hearts of oak, dre.

They swear they'll subdue us, these imbecile foes, Yet frighten no women, no children, nor beaux; But should they, the dark, spy plots once get o'er, Still Chartists they'll find us to fight them once more. Hearts of oak, &c.

We'll-still make 'em run, and still make 'em sweat, In spite of their Griffins and Tory gazatte; Then cheer up, ye Chartists, once more let us sing, Our Chartre, our rights, and the blessings they bring. Hearts of oak, &c.

Heard ye that soul-inspiring sound, Borne swiftly on the evining gale, Diffusing gladness o'er the land, Stilling the mourning orphan's wail

Joy to the starving poor opprest, Those glorious whisperings do bring : Throughout the breadth of Albion's Isle Its heartfelt cheering accents ring.

Its whisper'd murmurs low and soft, When first it struck upon the ear Of tyrants and their courtly horde, Them smote with pallid, coward fear.

At the White Hill colliery there are about seventy black sheep, pretending to hew coal. they are (I am told) a most wretched set, consisting country labourers, and some who never before laboured at all. Indeed the great part of these miserable cowardly Black Nebs are the very refuse of society; getting these mean fellows to pretend to work, is an ariful dodge, got up to frighten the poor colliers into work: but the brave lads see through the trick, and will not be caught. As might be expected, these fellows taking the colliers work, has greatly exasperated the latter, and it is feared they will be attacked; however, I would advise them to let them alone; they will shortly find their own level. THE NORTHERN STAR.

THE GOVERNMENT VICTIMS.

An additional demonstration against that vile species of Government tyranny, which has, within the last few months, filled the prisons of England with virtuous and skilful English artisans, for seeking, in public meeting, to make known their grievances, and to discuss the most legitimate means of procuring a redress of them, together with the means of bread for their "starving wives and families," took place on Thursday night, in the shape of a public meeting. at the Hail of Science, High-street, Whitechapel. The object of the meeting was to express the public detestation of a Government that could thus act, and to mark that detestation the more strongly by entering into a subscription in aid of the " victims" to so despotic and atrocious a policy. On the motion of Mr. Drake.

Mr. Mantz was called to the chair. He said he regretted the Chartists were not doing their duty to themselves, otherwise the Hall in which the meeting over which he had the honour to preside, was held, would, at that late hour, have been crowded to inconvenience. They had met on the present occasion, not merely as matter of form-not merely to breathe the feelings of indignation against a Government that could act so tyrannically as the present was acting; but upon a question which concerned them all, involving as it did the proposition, whether a man was to "think freely," or whether tyranny was to say, in this enlightened land. "Thus far shalt thou go and no farther." The Government that would dare attemut to restrict a people from the free expression of their grievances, and who would say to them they must think only as they (the Government) thought, was the greatest of all tyrannies-(hear, hear)-but all would not do; the mind of man would still be frea-thear and loud cheers) Man was, by his Creator, endowed with the power to think, and to express his thoughts; and it was not for tyrant man to dare to stop him in the exercise and expression of the mind thus given-(hear, hear.) The enemies of the people's rights might say, that they (the people) lived in "a free country," and might do this or that. But in this they reminded him of the "French" press, which said, "you may print this or that; but you must not say anything against the Ministry. " or State"-(laughter.) And so with the present tyrannical Government of England-(hear, hear.) The people might say or think what they pleased; but as soon as they said anything against them, they (the Ministry), would seize upon, drag, and dress any lengthened remarks to the meeting. He might illustrate this base intolerance, by a quotation, of which it reminded him, from the poet, namely :--

"A subject's faults, a subject may proclaim, A monarch's errors are forbidden game." (Cheers.)

The people, undismayed by such proceedings, should follow the advice of their tried and valued friend. him, be prepared to "brave the battle and the be free-(hear, hear, and cheers). The association of kindred spirits was one of the greatest and most desirable things that could be for the attainment of the great object which the people had in view. Associating together, they were strong; but divided, they were weak. (Hear, hear.) It was swinl in a country like England, that men for standing up against such a system of tyranny should be seized upon as the victims to whom the resolution referred were, and deprived of their rights and liberties-(hear, hear). He (Mr. Abel Cooke) felt as if he could "at one fell swoop," level the tyrants who thus basely, unjustly, and wantonly oppressed his felin a felicitous manner, to the great aid and impulse which the Charter must derive from "the women of England," coming out, as they were, in its favour, and concluded amid the plaudits of the meeting, by seconding the resolution.

Mr. Davenpert, a veteran Reformer, moved the second resolution, to the following effect :--

"That this meeting deeply sympathise and console with those brave and virtuous patriots, who, in defiance of the tyranny of despots, have nobly stood forward as the champions of the rights and liberties of millions, to obtain for the mass of the population of this country a protection for labour, a voice in the State, and a fair division of political power; and pledges itself to use its best exertions by way of subscriptions and collections, and all other means in its power, to defray the expences of those victims who are awaiting their trials. and to support the wives and families of those who are has inflicted, and still threatens to inflict with her merciless and iron band, and thus save them from seeking the tender mercies of the Commissioners of the Poor Law Bastiles."

In moving that resolution, it would be superfluous indeed, in him, he (Mr. Davenport) observed, to adeast them into prison-(hear, kear.) He (Mr. Mantz), strongly advocated a union between the middle and working classes, as the most likely means by which they could hope to achieve the great and glorious measure of "The People's Charter." He regretted that the meeting was not more crowded, and would of the "three millions" of them who had signed the Charter, would but give one penny each person to-O'Connor, should not shrink from danger, but like wards "the Victim Fund," the sum which would be breezs," and, as becomes Englishmen, determine to victims-(hear.) THE EXECUTIVE.

WE have not received the returns from elections of the persons nominated to fill up the vacancies in the Executive. The reason will probably be found in the following extract of a letter from the General | WILLIAM LINDSAY .- Too sadly is his dream realised. Secretary received, this day-Thursday :--

"I almost imagine the election at present will have to be abandoned, because there has not been time enough given. I have had a letter from Bairstow, and he says there will be much dissatisfaction in consequence of the shortness of the time, and Leach and myself expected there would have again been placed on the list those good and noble minds who have taken so active a part in our movement. Very few localities, as jyet, have sent in their approval or disapproval. You see there are only twelve names on the list. Mr. Watkins has declined. Messrs, Ross, West, and Clayton cannot be balloted for, on account of the informality Morling there is an objection raised against; so that will be as well to postpone the election until the time is settled by the plan of organisation. See the great number of honest and talented men who are virtually deprived of having votes tendered for them; and I am afraid at this juncture the votes would be far less in number than they were at the last time. Give this letter your consideration, and if it meets your appro bation, write a short article stating the reasons I have Now, why not submit this programme of business to the whole Conference for adoption or amendment ! The reason is just here. The committee is to be appointed the first thing. The Council hope that and at the beginning of the proceedings the attendance may not be full, and they may get a committee of their own choosing ; which committee having power to determine upon what business shall come before the same Judge. ILL MR. BEESLEY have the goodness to communicate his address to the Hull sub-Secretary, No. 10, Owen-square, New George-street?

landlord of this town has some preperty consisting, amongst the rest, of a hole fit only for a dog, and a small bakehouse, which has been in the occupation of several who have in vain endeavoured to make it answer. They have been obliged to give up, leaving Mr. Landlord minus, in most instances, his rent. The premises became void, and were likely to remain so, when a young man, who had served an honourable apprenticeship in the town, and being well known, took the premises at 4s. 8d. per week-an exorbitant rent for such a kennel-with not a particle of custom connected with the place. Well, Sir, by indefatigable exertions and persevering industry, he has established a very decent connection, and been enabled to get a plain yet comfortable livelihood, regularly paying the pro-prietor his rent, not being indebted to his landlord one farthing. With these facts before us,-and they are facts, for I have not only heard it from the man's own lips, but fully attested by others knowing the circumstances,-one would suppose Mr. ----- would feel proud of his tenant, and feel a pleasure in doing what he could to promote success. No, no, not so; avarice-greedy, grasping avarice-the characteristic of the sordid crew, had cast an eye upon him, and Mr. ----- very kindly told him, this week, he must pay the trifling addition of £1 19s. per annum-ninepence a week extra, making a total of £13 per year for a hole scarcely fit (as I said before) for a dog. This is not all: is the gentleman a Tory? No-can you believe it ?-- a member of the National Complete Suffrage Union, a professed admirer and follower, I presume of the philanthropic and generous Joseph Sturge, Esq., of Birmingham ! This is not an isclated case, but one that shows the natural disposition of these middle-class brawlers for union. I can tell the working class they may as well ask the wolf and lamb to unite to destroy despotism as to expect the middle class to do so until compelied. Still I have heard it said how very friendly they are in Sheffield, and how they sympathise with the working class; and many that I have met will believe it. Certainly there are exceptions to the general rule, and may be the middle class of Sheffield are so. As I know but little of them I will not gainsay it, but give them the benefit of the good opinion. Still actions speak louder than words; therefore, I say, test them: the proof of the nudding will then be in the eating; and I feel assured never was a better opportunity. Harney and others have to be tried, although out on hail. It is certain, without legal assistance they can have no chance, and counsellors will not work for nothing; on the contrary, they are expensive gentlemen, therefore I say to the working men of Sheffield, try how far they pity and are ready to assist you. Call upon them individually, and most respectfully-for they are fond of homage. Solicit a trifle for the defence of your sincere friends : if they refuse, why you will have nothing to thank them for; and then, without a word, go about your business. It will show at once their real disposition and intentions. And, my friends, not only will you be convinced, but remember funds-sye, ample funds-are and will be wanted to defend the victims of that hydra-headed monster, class legislation. Be the sum got from them ever so small, it will be of use. Wait upon the Complete Suffrage gentry for the same laudable purpose they can but refuse, and, as in White's case, write "No." Let this be done instantly: 'twill prove beyond the power of dispute what is to be expected from the middle class."

THE MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.

Last week we announced that the Chartists of Loeds had determined to try their strength in the annual municipal battle for class distinction : this week we have to report the progress they have made.

First, then, with

Chartists had first appeared as a distinct party; and by their means: and we are glad of it. here were all the means of opposition concentrated to prevent their success. The power of the press. were both put in active operation. Scores of workannihilation of both, as political parties, had they they were not free! They had the "bag" shook in their face if they did not vote as the employers directed. They had but the option of starvation, or political subserviency. This was a cruel alternative : and from it proceeds the Whig "triumph" ! one of the old representatives of Hunslet in the they practiced by whom they may. Common Council was particularly conspicuous. Wherever he had the least influence, either direct or indirect, he exerted it; plainly hinting what the consequence would be of disobedience to his directions. It was not wise of this "fifty years' Radical" thus to conduct himself. He owed his election last time to the Chartists, against whom, on this octo lack his presence! But he will rever venture were successful, the numbers being :again to ask for the suffrages of the Hunsle Burgesses. Before the term of his office expires we shall hear of his declining health; and of his wish to retire into private life Like the spaniel, he will save the Burgesses the trouble of kicking him down stairs, by retiring of himself. He already sees the foot prepared to administer the kick. He is conscious that his conduct on this occasion has earned for him the deep disgust and indignation of the inhabitants of the Ward ; he knows that conduct has stripped from off his Whig face the Radical veil he had covered it

Spite of all the means of intimidation resorted to by both parties, the Chartists mustured well. Two hundred and fire, of free and independent men, registered their votes on the occasion. The superiority contested this Ward. The latter was successful by of the ground of action taken by the Chartists was a majority of 32. felt and acknowledged by the representatives of both Whig and Tory parties engaged in taking the elec-tion. The votes for Mr. Hobson were felt to be those of pure feeling and principle. Both parties knew that they were not obtained by trick, or by intimidation, or by any unwerthy means. They knew, too, that those registered for the Whig and for the Tory were peachable. So conscious were they of the means to which they were indebted for their support, that both parties stated in the polling booth, that had the municipal voters had the protection of the Ballot, Mr. HOBSON would have been the man elected by them on this occasion. In this they were right. Nay, had the "fifty years'

" It is impossible to read the accounts of the military operations in China without shame and disgust. It is spired with one common feeling of sympathy with the not war, but sheer butchery-a battu in a well-stocked preserve of human beings. Captain Bingham, of the royal navy, in a book which we have not seen, but which the Standard has quoted with a justly indignant commentary, thus describes the capture of Ningpo :---"About 12,000 (Chinese) advanced upon the southern and western gates, the guards retiring before them. Are the magistrates of Bradford, then, destitute of the feelings of humanity? Are they to be considered superior to the ordinary weakness of mankind? Or are we to consider them inferior to the rest of men in sense at once and feeling? What the opinion of the public may be on these points when they consider the circumstances of their conduct, I will not now anticipate. A man was taken on the Friday after the attempt, on suspicion of being the guilty party, to whose features assailant, with the exception of his whiskers-features which every one knows can be disguised at pleasure. Yet with this testimony, and the full evidence in court

Sir, being a Tory myself, I would not be thought disrespectful to the Tory magistrates of Bradford, but if Such scenes, it appears, are continually recurring in any Whig magistrates had acted thus, I should certainly without a parallel. We know, however, our magisthe call of the dinner hour to the call of humanity ! office as magistrates?

But, Sir, our magistrates are wonderful people, wonderfully clever, wonderfully profound, wonderfully subtile! They, it seems, have discovered (marvellous peneration) that Miss Rigg was frightened and fancied there was a man! This, with her seamed shoulder in evidence before them ! Astonishing discovery, this ! unequalled solution of this difficult case ! If in all affairs that come before them, they show equal penetration, equal acumen, equal power of imagination, how blessed is our good town of Bradford !

Did any before ever conceive of fancy wounding a person, cutting off hair, pilfering silver spoons, and throwing a ragor over a wall? Faucy, forsooth! No doubt it was fancy, toe, in the person of Dr. Farrar, who dressed the wounds ! This, Sir, would at any rate be a very active fancy !

And what has been the consequence of this conduct of these magistrates?

Listen, Sir. Last Suuday evening. during service time, as Miss Rigg was going into the back parlour for a book, a man followed her and struck her violently on the arm twice with some heavy instrument. She fell ance, which frightened away the incarnate fiend who had attacked her. He left the house without taking or attempting to take anything. Her arm exhibits a dreadful contusion from above the elbow nearly to the wrist. Is this fancy, too, Messra. Magistrates ?

What, sir, are we to make of all this ? Here seems an infernal plot against the life of this young lady, than whom there never lived one gentler or more amiable. It can scarcely be doubted that it is one and the same man who has been concerned in all three attempts. It is remarkable that the last time he had his face blackened. as though determined not again to run the risk of having his features recognized. Shanks, president, in the chair. After the roll had been called, and some new members admitted, the secretary was requested to read extracts from the various papers professing to propagate our principles, with a view of conveying a correct knowledge of the general state of the movement. Among others, a report of a meeting of the Glasgow Complete Suffrage Association from the Nonconformist, at which a motion was made and passed, to the effect that a meeting would be got up under their auspices, in the Gorbals, for the purpose of extending their organisation. Mr. A. Graham then moved the following resolution, which being seconded, was passed unanimously :-- " That in the event of the Sturge party calling a meeting of the inhabitants of this barony, for the dissemination of sound Chartist principles, the members of this club do pledge themselves to attend in their individual capacity, and recommend their friends to do the same, for the purpose of lending their assistance in such a praiseworthy undertaking ; but if, as on former occasions, this party shall deal in vitupe-Mr. James Barritt, ditto, Highroyd, sub-Treasurer. | rative slander of our brave and disinterested leaders. Mr. Robert Townsend, twister, Wadsworth-row, and recommend the Complete Suffrage organisation as best calculated to carry out the object in view, we deem it our duty to place, side by side, with such recommendation the superior merits of the Glasgow Charter Association,-a society established, not in a hole and corner, but at a public meeting of our fellow-citizens, fairly celled; and we do hope that our consistent brother Chartists, and those who differ from them, will each and all give 'fair play, and no favour' to any speaker who may feel disposed to take a part in the proceedings, and, like true democrats, submit to the decision of the majority. After discussing other subjects, both local and general, relating to our agitation, and giving a vote of thanks to their president the meeting separated at a late hour. This club is composed of long and well-tried friends to the good old cause of rational Chartism, and working men too who are determined to criticise and freely discuss the merits of every man or body of men who now or who may claim public opinion, and call on their brother toilers to go and do likewise, believing that there is a swarm of political traffickers now infesting the land, which, if not narrowly watched will play off a second edition of the reform swindle of thirty-two. They meet once a fortnight in the above place where the Northern and Evening Stars are the constant companions of the board, and they would request the Chartisis of Glasgow as well as other places to support no house of public resort where these papers are not taken in. They wish also to notice to their friends in the respective districts in and around Glasgow, that among other objects they are associated for the purpose of bringing out lecturers of their own order and will hold themselves in readiness to send one or more of their number to any district where their services may be required, and that gratuitously, providing it does not interfere with their hours of labour. Their motto is speed the Charter, and may success attend all those who advocate its principles with a singleness of purpose, THE DIRECTORS of the Glasgow Charter Association met in the Hall, College open, on Friday evening, Mr. Thomas Aucolt in the chair. THE NORTHERN STAR.

TO THE SUBSCRIBERS TO THE WATKINS' TESTIMONIAL FUND.

"The cause of Chartism is too pure and too holy to be be trifled with-its escutcheon must be kept free substance; and if mire be cast upon its surface it must be instantly cleansed."

Editor of the Northern Star.

It is due to you, my London friends, and to the few memorial of my Chartist experience during a year's trial in the metropolis.

My visit to London was occasioned by the death of a talented friend, whose affairs I had been requested to the mean time time, I took every opportunity of becoming acquainted with town Chartism, which truth obliges me to say I found to be a hot-bed plant, more like a weed than a flower, and as perfectly in contrast with the healthy, hardy Chartism of the country as a British oak is to the ivy that clasps round it, to suck its heart out. At first I had been led by showy appearances to think that the men were far behind the leaders; but further insight enabled me to form a truer buyers and sel ers, and money-changers to set up their that is, he ruined her. estimate.

The unadulterated Chartism of the country was illrelished by the sophist cated palates of specious and whip of words, and scourge them all out. spurious Cockney Chartism: they manifested a dislike or dread of it, and a jealousy of its advocates. This vitisted taste of theirs was the mainspring of the New Move. which indeed was nothing more than a recoil back to the old move of Whig-Radicalism. The political Jews of the Globe in Shoe-lane were to be reinstated as the leaders of the people, in order that they might hang like drawbacks upon the canse-the star of Chartism was to make a retrogade motion. But never will sound principle rise to the ascendant in London; never will it truly progress until these old things are done away, and all things become new.

Compelled to be my own publisher and my own bookseller (for my drama of "John Frost" was not only rejected by those who call themselves Chartist booksellers but was also denounced by them), I was called upon by certain men of London to oppose the usurping, su face. "Truth hath a quiet breast." monopolizing, and tyrannical trade-league, whose members, though known to be mere traffickers in politics, had been ungradgingly supported until they showed themselves to be traitors also. God Almighty never intended me to be a bookseller, and God knows I never intended it myself. Feargus O Conner told me truly that I was not fit for a shopkeeper; kut I was ready to sacrifice my feelings and to make a large pecuniary sacrifice. I was willing to humble myself and to suffer whatever might serve the cause for the cause sake. There was no other method than the one I took to ex-

"I have already stated that they consider your ' Conditions of Debate' neither 'just nor 'impartial,' and I proceed now to assign their reasons for this opinion : Mr. Cook ... 0 1 0 and in doing so shall refer to your "Conditions of Debate,' not perhaps serialim, but in such order as they seem to be connected with each other. I stop not to comment upon the apparent inconsistency of a gentleman's claiming that the whole responsibility of this matter should rest exclusively upon himself, while he yet writes in his official character of "Corresponding Secretary' of a public body, This may be considered a matter of taste; and I trust that I and my brother Chartists shall always have higher objects of attention. "To your 'Conditions of Debate,' therefore, I address myself: minding little whether they be simply those of Mr. Robert Firth, or of the ' Corresponding Secretary of the Hull Anti-Monopoly Association ;" merely observing that I reply not individually, but for myself and my brother councillors by whom I am instructed.

"To the 4th. 5th, 6th, and 8th, of your 'Conditions of Debate' we offer no demur. The 2nd we consider so anxious to avoid. Our desire is that the preliminaries the 29th, else you should have heard from me before should be short, clear, and simple, that we may come to the work at once. "To your 7th 'Condition of Debate' we have a strong objection. The matter is one of great public interest and concernment. We are to presume that your object in seeking this debate is, like our own, simply benevolent -seeking to elicit Truth that it may be useful, and aid the uninformed in the formation of opinion; so that when Truth shall be discovered and established its votaries may be so numerous and ardent as to ensure its speedy triumph. And inasmuch as we think it probable that those who may most need enlightenment are the least able to pay for it. we entertain a strong objection to the money charged for admission, by which some might be excluded. We are anxious that the public should be RIGHTLY informed-that they should be misled neither by us nor others, and, therefore, we desire

THE VICTIM ELLIS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ! ORTHERN STAR.

DEAR SIR-Allow me, through the medium of your justly widely circulated journal, to make a few observations on behalf of that persecuted, much injured, though innocent man, Mr. Wm. Eilis.

Englishmen, I call upon you by all the endearing ties that bind man to man; you, whose fathers have fought, bled, and died for liberty ; and you, sons of Cambria, honourable. Their doctrine upon the subject of a whose taneful harp was always strung in favour of the oppressed; and you sons of Scotia, descendants of the heroes of Bannockburn ; and you, sons of the inhabitants of the lovely, though degraded and insulted Emerald Isle, to raily round this innocent man, for by your united voices alone can he be saved. Is call upon you to petition for his pardon, for by heaven, I again say he is innocent ; his friends are in possession of facts that will shortly be published, which will clearly prove even to the mest sceptical, that he is innocent, but let us look upon what evidence he has been convicted, out of the whole host of witnesses against him, only one man swears to him being at the fires, and that man says " he had only a side view of his face, and could not swear whether he had a hat on or not." There, fellow slaves I upon that evidence alene is Ellis convicted.

I will make no comment upon the above fact : hat simply ask you, if you think it right a man should be transported for twenty-one years upon such evidence. I now, for the present, leave the case with you, for you to make your own reflections upon it; but, in the mean time, I must tell you, that the case will be argued before the fifteen Judges in a short time, and that the sinews of war" are wanting, therefore send in your " mites" immediately to O'Connor, who will properly apply them. Do not, for God's sake, for the sake of your children, but, above all, for the sake of Ellis's wife and children, do not let him be sacrificed for the want of funds.

THE EXECUTIVE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NORTHERN STAR.

London, Nov. 1st, 1842.

SIR,-By an oversight of the Star of the 22nd inst. I was not aware of my nomination for the Executive by the Chartists of Brighton, until my attention was worded as to admit of much altercation. This we are called thereto by the Executive pro tem. in the Star of this time. I am not eligible to act in that capacity, not 'just' and more 'impartial' to leave the election of it, unbecoming proceeding, and that it does not reflect meeting, from the meeting, and by the meeting, without ators ; indeed, I am sure the country generally is not in favour of the scheme, as I perceive there is no nomination for Lancashire, or many other places. I believe it altogether to be a trisk of some enemy. Would in not be much more prudent to wait the election till March, its proper time? It is really too bad that our whole body must be put in motion to please the whim of any one who choose to send a line or two to the Star. This is the point the enemy seems to attack. and therefore we should be on the alert of him. and not allow ourseives to become his tools to carry out his objects. I would object to a new Executive on the following grounds :--

Because the powers which we had given the Executive in 1841, have not been taken from them, and are we now going to be tools in the enemy's hands to disarm them ? Campbell, Leach, and Willlams are still at their post: M'Douall and Bairstow are yet at large; and I see no good reason for the step that is about to Mealy-monthed spies were sent into my shop to entrap me, and multifaced emissaries into the localities favourable to me to warp them. The most insidious enemy of the working-men was induced to dispatch me in two successive numbers of his weekly paper; but checked by some remains of conscience, or of compunction, he could not do it without paying me the greatest compliment ever yet paid to man, if we consider that, and if he spend it, he would spend it not in the pomps at the very time he was paying me this compliment, he and vanities of this wicked world, not in prisons and had been employed to abuse me. TO THE CHARTISTS OF SCOTLAND.

FELLOW-COUNTRYMEN.-By the time this reaches you every locality in Scotland where there is a Chartist association will have received the address recommended by the late delegate meeting at Edinburgh, to be issued to the country. No time is to be lost wherever there is cannot permit you to place yourself in a position which an association, a committee, or but a score of Chartists in any village-they should meet and decide instantly whether they will support the plan or not.

If decided in favour of the plan a provision for carrying it out must be made by every place. First. For the tion afterwards, for lectures and whatever means of general agitation may be adopted. It was suggested by the delegates that if there were sixty associated discussion was your purpose; but a perusal of your localities an average of sixpence each, weekly, would furnish the salary of the secretary-if some could not give that others would give twice as much with case : it only requires every place where there is any number of Chartists, to decide what they can do, and estimate rather below than above, and take steps to send one quarter of a year's contribution, whatever it be-3s. 6s. 12s. or 24s .- and to commence instantly taking names of subscribers for the Scottisk Charlist Pioneer, and send the list into the committee, remembering that if the monthly publication is supported, the profits of it will pay the Secretary, who has to be Editor of it, and help

one about which the Chartists, as a body, never made These points settled, it will be the duty of each place to send in their opinion as to the general card of membership ; if there are but six Chartists in a village, they can still have cards sent them, and thus give assistance

> It is, therefore, respectfully requested that every place will send in an account how they have decided on those subjects; and, if they have not decided, instantly proceed to do so, in fairness to the rest of their brethren, who are anxiously waiting the result. All alf-past two o'clock on Saturday, the following lamentable accident occurred at a place called Mill Bay, near Plymouth. It appears a man by the name "1 That Mr. Beesley, or his party, do defray the whole of John Spiney, about thirty years of age, a lime burner, in the employ of Mr. T. Gill, M. P., in whose employ he has been for the last seven years, went "2. That each party appoint its own chairman-the | into a beer shop, called the Prospect Inn, and kept by a person of the name of Grace Sargent. He called for a pint of beer, upon which she told him to pay her what he owed her, and she never wanted to see him again. Words ensued ; from words they came to blows, she offering to strike him with a mcat-hock, she held in her hand ; he gave hor a push from him, and, shocking to tell, she came down with her head in contact with a wooden bench or stool, and never spoke again, heing lauched into eternity without a moment's thought of such a consummation. The man was placed in custody, offering no resistance. An inquest has been held upon the body, and a verdict of Manslaughter returned. The unfortunate woman was upwards of fifty, and the much-tobe-pitied prisoner leaves to sourow, no doubt for a long period, a wife and child to mourn over this unlooked-for event.

> SOMETHING LIKE AN INVENTION .-- THE STEAM-ENGINE SUPERSEDED .- A German is now in Liverpool, endeavouring to induce the merchants and shipowners of that enterprising town to patronise an invention which, if successful, will be likely to supersede the steam-engine. It is thus described in an extract of a letter with which a friend has favoured us:-"This machine can be employed instead of the steam-engine, without fuel of any kind, and without a boiler : it needs very little repairs, and can be worked without danger ; any power can be employed. from one to one thousand horses or more ; it may be made of brass or iron, and the power of the machine exists within itself, and does not diminish, but remains always the same. It may be employed on railroads, in ships, and manufactories, with the same effect as the sleam-engine, and does not create any noise, and does not require more attendance than the Oats and Oatmeal, from their scarcity, commanded higher prices ; and an advance of 2d per 55lbs. on the former, and 6d to Is per load on the latter article was realized, but only in limited quantities to the dealers.

LONDON COBN EXCHANGE, MONDAY, OCT. 31.-The supplies during last week were moderate of English Grain and Flour of all sorts, but of Irish Oats the arrival was most abundant, being equal to about 57,654 quarters. Of foreign Wheat we had also several cargoes arrived, in the whole amounting to near 13,000 quarters. The demand throughout the week for Wheat was languid, and prices rather tended downwards, particularly samples of middling inferior quality. Foreign Wheat might have been purchased on decidedly lower terms, and some considerable quantity changed hands at the decline. For other Grain the trade ruled steady, with the exception of Irish Oats, which on Friday receded from 1s. to 2s. per quarter, according to quality. To this morning's market the show of English samples fresh up was moderate of English Wheat and other Grains. Wheats have been taken off more fully than on this day week, but prices have undergone improvement. Barley has met a fair demand, at the rates of this day week. Irish Oats meet a tolerably free sale, at a decline of 1s. to 2s. per quarter. The supply of Beans and Peas, both White and Gray, has been fully equal to that of last Monday, and good boiling Peas are in demand at prices the turn dearer than on that day. In Flour we hear of no alteration. Seeds of all descriptions meet an average demand, and all description are unaltered in value.

LONDON SMITHFIELD MARKET, MONDAY, OCTOBER 31.-The official return of Foreign cattle imported into London under the new tariff, for the week ending the 29th instant, is sixty-seven head of bullocks, of which two were from Oporto, and the greater portion of the remainder from Holland. Besides these there were some from Spain, by way of Devonshire. With one or two exceptions, these cattle were again of a very inferior quality ; not so old perhaps, generally, as some on former occasions, but decidedly in a poorer condition. This quality of foreign beasts attracts little notice beyond that of mere curiosity; this was the most observable to-day, as very few "bics" were made for them, and the salesmen found a difficulty in fixing a price. Few sold, and those at a very low figure. The average price cannot be quoted higher than 2s. 6d. to 2s. 8d. per stone Although during the Midsummer quarter a larger supply of home-bred cattle is expected than during the preceeding one, yet the number of English Bal locks at market to-day was exceedingly large, being full 4,000 head. Of these the principal number were from Leicestershire, but the whole of the countie which at this season of the year supply the marks forwarded a larger number than for a long while past There was also an increased number of Short Horn and Runts. The demand for Beef was very limited and the over abundance of the supply increased the dullness of trade. Prices, from these circumstance
