THE SECRET MEDICAL ADVISER.

BEING a practical Treatise on the prevention and cure of the VENEREAL DISEASE, and other affections of the urinary and sexual organs, in both sexes, with a mild and sustaining mode of treatment, and its consequences; especially Stricture, Gleet, affections of the Bladder, Prostrate Glands, Gravel, &c., shewing also the dangerous consequences of Mercury, such as eruptions of the skin, puffed face, &c.; with plain directions for a perfect restoration : embellished with engravings. An ample consideration of the diseases of women; also nervous debility; including a comprehensive dissertation on the anatomy of Marriage, impurities of blood, &c.; and the various causes and various interruptions of the Laws of Nature.

Also some animadversions on the Secret Sin of Onanism, which entails such fearful consequences on its victims.

This Work is undoubtedly the most interesting and important that has hitherto been published on this subject, imparting information which ought to be in the possession of every one who is labouring under any secret ailment, whether male or female.

Continues to be consulted from nine in the morning till ten at night, and on Sundays till two,—and country patients requiring his assistance, by making up his itineraries for the purpose, so that his medicines as well enable them to obtain a permanent and effectual cure, when all other means have failed.

In recent cases of a certain disorder a perfect cure is completed in one week, or no charge made for medicine after that period, and in those cases where other practitioners have failed, a perseverance in the method here carried by the circulation of the blood into all parts of the body, the whole frame becomes tainted with venereal poison, and most unhappy consequences ensue, at one time affecting the skin, particularly about the face, with eruptions and discolours resembling, and often attended with scurvy, at another period producing the most violent pains in the limbs and bones, which are frequently mistaken for rheumatism; at times the whole frame becomes debilitated and decayed, and a lingering death pursues a period to their dreadful sufferings.

What a grief for a young person in the very prime of life, to be snatched out of time, and from all the enjoyments of life, by a disease always local at first, and which never proves fatal if properly treated, as all its fatal results are owing either to neglect or ignorance!

Mr. W.'s invariable rule is to give a Card to each of his Patients as a guarantee for what he pledges himself to perform, or return his fee.

The various forms of bodily and mental weakness, incapacity, suffering, and distress, which are met with in this cautiously written and practical work, are almost unknown, generally misunderstood, and treated upon principles correspondingly erroneous and superficial, by the present race of medical practitioners. The author, however, has endeavoured to provide a timely safeguard, a silent yet friendly monitor, where debility has made threatening inroads, the means of escape and the certainty of restoration are pointed out. The medical advisers are extensive and identical in their secret, and their hidden origin, there are none to whom, as Parents, Guardians, Heads of Families, and especially of public Schools, is confided the care of young people, who ought to be taught for a moral and physical education, and whose salutary cautions this work is intended to convey.

Not only are the most delicate forms of general rectitude neglected by the family physician, but the entire management of the individual, the exclusive study of a life entirely devoted to the routine of general practice, and (as in other departments of the profession) a tentative concentration in the daily and long continued observation requisites for the correct treatment of sexual infirmities.

If we consider the topics upon either in a moral or social point of view, the interests of society are manifestly seriously involved. The prevalence of indiscriminate and secret indulgence in certain practices, are described with an accuracy and force which display at once profound reflection and extensive practical experience. —The Planet.

"The best of all friends is the PROFESSIONAL FRIEND; and in no shape can he be consulted with greater advantage than in the case of MANLY VIGOUR." The initiation into vicious indulgence, its progress—its results in both sexes, are given with faithful, but alas! for human nature, with afflicting truth. However, the Authors have not exposed the cause of the mischief, nor do they attempt to remove it. "MANLY VIGOUR" temporarily impaired, and mental and physical emaciation, produced by uncontrolled indulgence of the passions, can be restored; for the consequences resulting from the consumption of the consequence of early indiscretion, although admitted, counter his fellow man, can regain the vigour of health and moral courage. The work is written in simple and perspicuous style, displaying how often fond parents and friends, who are ignorant of the appearance of their youthful offspring; how the attenuation of the frame, palpitatio of the heart, derangement of the nervous system, cough, indigestion, and a train of similar and pernicious symptoms, or general debility, are often referred to wrong causes, and in stead of being the natural results of congenital debility or disease, are the consequences of an alluring and pernicious practice, alike destructive to the mind and body. —Dell's New Weekly Messenger.

"Although a newspaper is not the ordinary channel for the expression of opinion upon the merits of any medical work, this remark is open to exception in any instance where the public, and not the isolated and exclusive members of the profession, are the parties addressed. Upon that which is directed to the indiscriminating public, it is necessary to express opinion, and will demand that medical works for popular study should be devoid of that mysterious technicality in which the science of medicine has heretofore shrouded its own ignorance. The work before us is not only free from the errors of mystery, very strangely, neglected by the medical attendant, and requiring doubtless (as in operative midwifery and the surgery of the eye) an entire devotion to the study of the subject, but it is written in a clear, intelligible, and it is evidently the production of a mind long and practically conversant with the subject, and the division of the human organization." —The Magnet.

"The security of HAPPINESS IN THE MARRIAGE STATE is the chief anxiety of all; but many dread entering upon wedded union, through a secret fear of untidiness for the discharge of matrimonial obligations. This essay is most particularly addressed to those who are deterred from matrimony by the alleged to; and advice will be found calculated to cheer the drooping heart, and point the way to renovated health."

YEARS OF AGE.—An inquest was held last Friday evening, before Mr. Baker, at the saloon and Ball, Bethnal-green, on the body of Mr. Joseph Farrer, aged 97, who committed suicide as follows:—It appeared from the evidence taken that the deceased latterly, owing to his advanced age, had given signs of derangement, and laboured under the delusion that the Devil was after him. On Wednesday he took his dinner, and appeared in better spirits than usual. He afterwards, according to his custom, went up
